VIOLENCE PREVENTION

(IN PERSON OR VIRTUAL)

Active shooter incidents are predictable and consequently preventable events in the workplace as well as in our day to day lives. These acts of violence are the behavioral destination of a “pathway to violence.” Along that pathway, attackers typically display risk factors and observable behaviors that others may recognize before an attack is carried out. The RJM Strategy Group’s Violence Prevention program is meant to provide participants with a basic understanding of the behavioral evolution of an active shooter and help them recognize potential signs or cues that may indicate an individual is in distress, in need of help or may be planning a violent act.

Participants will benefit from the following:

- Learning how to recognize risk factors and behaviors before an attack.
- Becoming skilled in how to mitigate danger, minimize injury, and increase the odds of survival during an incident.
- Developing the confidence and ability to protect yourself (and others riding with you) in a threatening and emotionally charged situation.
